

TOTSUP[®]

The reward chart tots love lots

Assembly instructions:

Using the removable adhesive letter stickers, personalise the white strip of your child's Big Red Bus, before positioning it firmly in to the two slots of the road component.

Position the bus stop in the green base component. Place your passengers on the bus stop ready to begin.

How does the TOTSUP red bus work?

Growing up is a journey, not without its bumps and bends. Praise your child's good behaviour with the TOTSUP Big Red Bus full of friends.

With its simple, unique and interactive approach, The TOTSUP Big Red Bus is the ideal reward chart for children aged 2-6½. The bright colours, smiling faces, and the ability for children to personalise their bus, makes for a fun reward chart that encourages and reinforces good behaviour.

The passengers begin on the bus stop. Each time your child successfully achieves a pre-agreed target, they may place a passenger of their choice on to the bus. Once all 10 passengers are on board, their achievement should be celebrated with a pre-agreed reward.

For a reward chart to be effective, it should be used consistently. You should be clear with your child about what they must do in order to place a passenger on their bus, as well as their reward for filling the bus.

Make the Big Red Bus accessible and visible. Children will enjoy having access to it and watching the bus fill up. We recommend storing the bus stop and passengers away, and if necessary, out of reach, until your child has earned a new passenger.

What can the TOTSUP bus be used for?

The TOTSUP Big Red Bus can be used to encourage and reward whatever positive behaviours you would like to see. These could include:

- Bedtime routines, staying in bed, preventing night-waking
- Potty training or toileting
- Brushing teeth and washing hands
- Getting dressed and undressed
- Manners
- Sharing, being kind, playing nicely
- Eating, sitting at the table, trying new foods
- Giving up a dummy, bottle, or comforter
- Tidying up and/or putting away toys

The reward chart could also be used for dealing with tantrums, rough play, and other behavioural issues. These are some suggestions. Essentially the Big Red Bus can be applied to anything you want your child to achieve.

Choosing a reward

When choosing your child's reward, select something small that your child will feel motivated to earn, and which is appropriate to their achievement. Choose something simple, inexpensive or free, and something your child will find fun. Stickers and small treats work well, as do a trip to the park, a walk in the woods, or an afternoon of messy play. It's important that you choose something that will be of interest and enjoyment.

Extended use: Emotional literacy - developing your child's emotional and social skills.

Encourage your child to talk imaginatively about each character on the bus, likening them to friends and family members, choosing names for them, and talking about the journey they are on.

Discuss the destination of the bus, e.g. the park, the beach, the supermarket, a holiday, and what might happen there. Talk to your child about particular journeys or visits they have enjoyed and what they remember.

This additional interaction will stimulate your child, and will make their journey even more rewarding.

WARNING: This product is not a toy, please ensure it is kept out of the reach of children and is used only with adult supervision.
